This week's magic four-letter word is FALL. Let's see if we can use it in a sentence or two. Fires in California and the PNW are finally getting nearer to containment this week as cooler and wetter FALL weather sets in. The pace of commodity markets is cooling as well (finally). SPF and SYP dimension are showing cracks now and are starting to FALL, as is SYP plywood. OSB continues to hold firm at the peak, but decreased takeaway from the big boxes may be the catalyst that starts a FALL here, too. There continues to be a significant gap between the cash markets and the futures market. Shy any more apocalyptic events, we should see availability improve and price relief in the coming weeks. As challenging as this year has been for buyers, we're looking forward to an amazing FALL.
