Lumber markets remain in downward adjustment mode across all species. SYP 2x4 continues to drop, while other widths fell but not as far. SPF continues to soften, and futures got battered again as well. DF in both dry and green are peeling off at a good clip, and studs are a dog with no home. Fir plywood continued it's fall, while SYP may have found a trading level after weeks of softness. OSB somehow remains impervious to a fall and remains at record high levels. Get ready for a crazy week ahead as the country starts the process of deciding who is President.
