The week (and year) started off on a slower note by most accounts, and what business did transpire did so at higher prices. The challenge continues to be around availability, with little to be had for prompt shipment. Reports of vendors walking from commitments are sadly becoming more widespread. SYP dimension leads the way in terms of pricing, with triple digit increases the norm over the last few weeks. All other dimension and stud species remain on the upswing as well, as do OSB and plywood across all regions. Reports of jobs being delayed are a double-edged sword, with hopes that it will top the market versus the fact that there is still strong pent up demand.
