The bifurcation between lumber and panels became more pronounced this week as SYP dimension, particularly the narrows, dropped in earnest. Other lumber species appeared topy as buyers took note of the cracks in SYP. For many, any sign of price relief is welcome, but no one is popping any champagne corks just yet. The other side of the coin shows the panel and EWP markets, which remain undersupplied and overpriced. Plywood and OSB ran up yet again this week in both Southern and Western markets, soaring again to new record highs.
