The tone of the market remains the same as it has been, with buyers largely on the sidelines as overall demand continues to be soft. Specific to Multifamily projects, demand is strong. It's the other segments that are lacking the drive to reverse the weak market. Dimension lumber prices dropped in all species, and panels continue to fall. A lot of steam has come out, and the risk of a bounce becomes greater with each passing day. Many buyers and traders anticipate a round of harder buying ahead. Be careful not to wait too long for a bottom, as mill curtailments could tighten things soon enough.
