Lumber prices softened as supply continues to be plentiful in most species & trims. Downside risk is minimal now as we track at pre-pandemic trading levels on dimension & studs. Canfor announced further curtailments out of their mills in an attempt to stem the bleeding. Plywood was still soft this week, but that could change if OSB firms. Several large OSB producers went OTM over the past couple of weeks. That does not mean they stopped producing, though. We will see if they can use their Jedi mind-tricks to make panels bounce in earnest. EWP and engineered siding products continue to be tightly allocated, creating bottlenecks and delays. September and October are typically very active months in the construction industry, and Labor Day is looming. Plan ahead!
