Plenty of activity in this short week, with lumber pricing mixed but in general gaining ground. Dry DF narrows have been active and up, especially 2x6. In DF studs, 2x6-9's are the hot ticket at the moment. SPF studs and plate have firmed, as has SYP dimension. Plywood is making small gains, and OSB is flat (unless you stand it on edge). It will be a busy September and October across the country. Concerns that the ongoing coronavirus increases may impact production levels is valid, but could likely also impact takeaway levels. Secondaries are taking bigger positions and so mill order files getting stronger. Does it have staying power beyond September?
