The market began the week at a slower pace and softness was evident in both lumber and panels. There appears to be adequate demand coming primarily from the multifamily sector as buyers looked to cover forward blocks at discounted pricing with varying degrees of success. Mills resisted selling into 2022 for the time being, though some secondaries accepted orders shipping in Q1 and Q2. The volume of inquiry led some players to believe that a downturn would be short lived. Trucking continues to tighten.
