Here we are right back on the same rollercoaster ride we were on a year ago. Commodity markets saw accelerated increases of triple digits this week across most items and species. Availability is once again a huge concern as mills are largely off the market. If you are looking for anything in short order, you will be paying up if you can even find it. Reports that rail is improving in the flooded parts of BC did nothing to calm the market. For now it appears that this is how we get to ride out the rest of 2021 and the beginning of 2022. Time to start hitting the eggnog yet?
