Markets were a mixed bag this week, with OSB and plywood prices on the rise and continuing to be in tight supply. Many buyers speculated that EWP pricing would soon rise and availability on joists, LVL, LSL and rimboard would only get worse in the coming months. Lumber activity was subdued compared to recent weeks as mill order files have stretched beyond some buyers comfort level. Inventories are still lean with transportation concerns on the forefront as buyers wait for late shipments. Quick loads continue to be difficult to source and if found are garnering a premium. It is definitely a market that warrants thinking ahead of your needs.
