Gravity sucked more juice from the market this week as sellers came to terms with the fact that this drop is accelerating across the board. Triple digit adjustments were the norm for most species, even OSB. Futures saw another tough week, with cash pulling it down. Inventory levels on the street are still to the lean side, but that didn't seem to matter to most buyers who seem content to wait until last minute to purchase any needs. More rumblings that the Fed will be taking further steps to fight inflation kept the bears in control of the market. Spring is sprung, prices are normalizing, and it's Masters weekend and opening day for MLB.
