Lumber markets continue to grind down as lower GDP/Dow/Futures #'s put a halt on any momentum that started to form midweek. GRN DF continues its slow move up as the only nightlight in a very cautious gloomy market. Hurricane Ian (as devastating as it has been) has had almost no effect on lumber/panel markets which is extremely unusual. Plywood mills and wholesalers are all looking for last look as it continues its downward slide. OSB mills took some downtime for maintenance and #'s continue to be flat to off slightly. All that said, we did have good activity Tues/Wed in several markets and DRY DF studs were traded heavily, albeit at a discount. Thursday's economic downturn halted any momentum that formed and had traders and buyers at a stalemate. RIP to Coolio... Now Laying Peacefully in "Gangsta's Paradise".
