More air came out of the lumber markets in the holiday shortened week. Green DF, which enjoyed a nice run in prior months on the Weyerhaeuser strike, is quickly deflating. SYP dimension sales have quieted and flattened. Studs are adjusting down hard, with green leading the drop and all dry species falling behind them. Panels remain in much the same mode, with plywood dropping and OSB languishing. Economic headwinds continue to be disconcerting, though a slight uptick in new home sales was welcomed as rates pulled back slightly. Multifamily remains active, but rising rates and cooling rents have investors watching closely. It's time for a break spent with family and friends - Happy Thanksgiving 2022.
