Another (bank) holiday shortened week saw a quiet start, but picked up some steam. GDF continues to firm as mills have gained the upper hand, with narrow dimension and studs seeing the most action. SYP dimension saw steady activity and prices rose on the narrows. Similarly, SPF narrows saw more activity than the wides. Dry DF remained flatter in price and activity than the other species. Studs saw price increases across all species, with 2x6-9 ft trims the tightest item to find. OSB perked up in western markets, but by and large seemed in a digestive phase. Plywood was flat in most fir markets, while SYP showed slow steady gains. Rain in California has finally tapered off, but has left some messes behind. Speaking of messes, did you see poor Tom Brady on Monday night?
