It was yet another week of sluggishness in commodity markets as spring gets nearer to summer. Futures saw more participation as the contract changed from old to new. The tone continues to create a lack of urgency on the buy end. Single family is doing better than many anticipated with the dearth of existing homes available for sale in most real estate markets, but it's not enough to awaken the slumbering housing market. A bump in prices might be good for all at this point. In unrelated news, how about the merger between the PGA and LIV golf? Ain't nobody saw that coming - and based on the shocked responses from PGA golfers, it could serve as a lesson in how NOT to communicate with employees!
