Lumber markets waffled in most species again this week as the slower pace of trading continued. Green DF in particular showed price weakness and is at or near the lows of the year. SYP saw some strength in 2x4, but 2x6 was the opposite case. Panels remain a mixed bag, with OSB softening on weaker sales and SYP perking up a touch. Fir plywood remains a yawner. Mixed signals regarding the Fed's next interest rate meeting cropped up again this week, with some experts speculating that another .25 point increase may be in the works. This has been a tough year to read for certain. Rough week for New York football teams - even with the Jets win.
