The overall tone of the market remains much the same - generally soft with some spots of activity that are holding firm and in some cases kicking up a few bucks. SYP was on the sluggish end of the spectrum while SPF and GDF saw a better week of sales. Panels remain a mixed bag. Southern plywood seems schitzophrenic and is trying to find its identity. What it apparently does not identify as is OSB, which continues to be in tight supply in a market with muted demand. Western plywood is firm but mostly static in price. Dry DF studs are ticking up again. Many industry traders were at NAWLA this week, adding to a quieter tone from midweek on.
