Demand in lumber continued to stay muted as the stalemate between sellers and buyers persisted. Mills rejected aggressive counters and buyers were content to sit back to find a clearer market direction before taking any sort of position. DF studs were a bright spot moving up on a curtailment announcement LW. Futures drifted backwards as the week went on, adding to the tepid pace. OSB in the south traded sideways while Northern Board bounced off a bottom late in the week, and firmed with several mills finding levels to attract enough orders to clear out any excess wood. Purdy v Mahomes 4:30p MT Sunday in Vegas. I'm all in.
