Last week's indicators that the market may have peaked were confirmed this week almost across the entire range of lumber species and markets. We are back to a market that appears to be under demanded as supply has caught up after the latest run up in prices, and it's most clear in SYP dimension as the narrows are cracking the hardest. Green DF is not far behind, while dry DF and SPF saw less price adjustment. Panels saw SYP plywood on the upswing, while western plywood saw only slight increases. Rain in California has slowed the activity across much of the state. OSB remains relatively flat and should remain that way in the near term. Congrats to the U.S. Women's Hockey Team for bringing home the Gold!
