Most commodity markets stayed on pace with the last couple of weeks and in a number of instances firmed up significantly. SYP dimension continues to lead the charge, showing double digit increases once again as the supply side appears to have tightened up. Flatbed trucks are adding to the tight feel, with tight supply in availability in the south and east, and ever increasing fuel prices bringing "fuel surcharge" back into the lexicon of lumber. Green dimension narrows continue to show upward price movement, as does SYP plywood. On the other hand, OSB has shown little movement across all regions. It's been much the same for western fir plywood. Temps in many areas are warming up early - this could get interesting.
