The tone of the commodity markets trended similar to last week, with SYP cooling as buyers sense that an adjustment may be in the books. On the DF side, narrow GDF remains in tight supply and prices rose once again. Dry DF ticked up to a smaller degree than green. SPF dimension saw a relatively flat week, and studs saw minimal gains, if any. Panels also stayed the course in terms of price trends, with SYP and Western Fir plywood showing small gains, and OSB remaining relatively unchanged once again. Fuel costs continue to be of concern across most regions, and trucking is still tight in the South. At least we have both the NBA and NHL playoffs to distract us a bit. In particular, the hockey players are hitting harder and fighting more frequently - the best time of the season!
