The week started off similar to the week prior, at a slower pace, on most dry dimension items. By Thursday activity picked up, with SPF leading the way. Conversely, SYP started hotter with prices adjusting down a bit later in the week, though overall they saw an increase. Transportation shortages and high fuel costs continue to vex the southern markets. Green DF saw the steepest discounts, mainly on the narrow widths - which until the last week has been on a head scratcher of a run for most of 2026. Panels remain in a similar mode as in prior weeks, and OSB continues to see minimal swings and remains mostly flat.
It's the Spurs vs the Knickerbockers for the NBA title... who ya' got?
