Activity continues to be mostly hand to mouth in most regions as trends from last week remain in place. SPF dimension saw price appreciation, as did SYP dimension. Yella pine remains in a tough cycle due to tight transportation dynamics. Mills can quote prompt wood, but finding trucks makes it anything but prompt on the shipment side, and transportation costs make most purchases tough to swallow. No one wants to try to build any kind of inventory under the circumstances. GDF narrows continue to soften, but dry is not following that trend. Supply is tight with minimal Canadian wood feeding the markets. DF studs refuse to soften, with mills holding firm on price. Panels showed little activity and little price change on both plywood and OSB. We have a heckuva couple of championship series going in both the NBA and the NHL. Looks like the Knicks year, finally.
